Lines Inscribed to Mrs. Lois Axton of Owensboro, Ky.

O, grieve not for your little John,

Dear mother, weep no more, But deem me now your sainted son

Since she must come to me.

I cannot, wish not to return Again to earth and thee, But wherefore should my mother mourn

I've quit the earth's unhappy scene When thousand His approx. And lost a world of woe to gain

One of eternal joy. I've reached the blessed land of light And joined the angelic choir, Put on the shining robe of white

And struck the golden lyre. My dreamy eye and far-off gaze Dimly on earth beheld As though an intervening haze What here is all revealed.
